JUSTICE IN THE BYE-WAYS—
A NOVEL By F COLBURN ADAMS.
The Second Edition now ready.
This exciting tale, this grand sansama of life as it is, is fast finding it a way to the fires do of every Christian family.
Mayor Wood, when asked by an impertinent Alderman if he had read "Justine in the Bye Ways," seplied traher satisfiely.
"A curse upon your poor pilitosophers, I would takey were all Governors of maintaintied islands, for then they might discourse their makes to the winds. For myself I trust in heaven, where the power of treit spleen cannot enter. Let them take heed," It was evident by this that his Honor had mistaken the book for something of a personal nature. Seeing this, the impertinent Alderman interrupted by assoring his Honor that the book was in no wise malicious, but one from which he might derive much add it carrying out those promised reforms which he had so frequently described as his soul's highest ambition. Wherenous his Honor said he would take the earliest opportunity to read it.

His Honor did read it, and though it had been said (some-THE INDEPENDENTS.

Truly here is a gallery of Sacred Fictures, possessing the deepest interest for the lover and student of the Holy Scriptures. You will find them consolers of lonelineas—a sweet fisticity to the soul—relief to the jaded mind—windows to the in prisoned thought—books, histories and sermons which can be read with only the trouble of turning over the leaves. Reader!
peruse this advertisement. Call and examine the work in various styles of bineing, and you will be convinced how valuable an assistant it must be in Hows Education.
As the time of the year for making presents near, we suggest to parents and teachers the propriety of choosing a copy of the PICT JRIAL BIBLE, as an encouragement to their culldent on study the Word of God, and a new and beautiful indium of interesting the members of their class.
The following work is destined, if we can form an orinion from the natices of the press, to have an unprecedented circulsition in every section of our wide-spreat continent, and to form a distinct era in the sale of our works. It will, no doubt, in a few years become THE FAMILY BIBLE OF THE

His Henor did read it, and though it had been said (somewhat facetioners) of his Honor, that he was blessed with a rare facility for assuming fantasate slapes to effect his various purposes, he in this instance, di-played the most worthy magnantity for having read the book, he forthawth ordered copies for the whole Board of Aldermen. Further, he emjoined the recessity of an attentive perusal. Exincing that valor by which he has schieved immortal honors in the marching and countermarching of our intrepld police, he, when last seen was at the head of his galant and very harmonious Board of Aldermen, making an inspection of the "House of the Nine Nations" (so graphically described in this book), from the crasy old steps of which he was relieving himself of a grandioquent lecture on the rights and duties of depraved nature, to the motley assembly there congregated. A few persons were reinfined to designate this mere straignen, at which he (nis Honor) was known to be observed than his adversaries. Others said it was curly another proof of his Honor's wisdom in council and promptitude in action.

From the very circumspect New York Evening Post: "The book will interest the treader both from the dramatic skill with which the story is evolved and from the novelty of its theme."

Albany Evening Journal; "A narrative of exciting interest. New York Surday Times: "The plot is ingenious. The subject is bandled with great ability."

The Mirror (the great reflector of progressive journalism) says: "The writer spends a good deal of ammunition—frequently with effect.

New York Atlas: "We commend it most heartily to the public, as one from which all readers may derive much benefit and instruction."

The New-York Son, a journal healthy people were careful never to read on a dull December day, says: "The belies have evidently not smiled upon our author; yet his spite, or the sub-set, has mitch in it."

E. W. Robert. With an Introduction by the Rev. Robert Baird, D. D.

This is an elaborate analysis of the facts of the so-called modern Spiritualism. The learned author is of the Evangelical party smong the European Protestants; and considering the new isms a most dangerous heresy, because, affecting to repose upon a perennial foundation of reality spiritual facts it pretends to unsettle the essential faith of the Church by facts as undealable as were those upon which the Church stose. M. Gasparin has repeated all the experiments of the sol-disant Spiritualists, fairly and fully, and has successfully exploded their specious and bold hypothesis, by a rigidly scientific course of analysis.

The Rev. Dr. Baird in his latroduction to the work says:

"In the work, to which these lew paragraphs respecting its author will serve as an introduction, the reader will find a very full account of the experiments which Count Gasparin and his friends made with so much care, and on so many occasions, and the conclusions to which he came. He will find also the Count's speculations on other, and, in a certain sense, kindred subjects; such as the Superiments which Count ful also the Count's speculations on other, and, in a certain sense, kindred subjects; such as the Superiments with the vivacity when a characterize the French mind, and in the style in which it expresses its conceptions; and, so far as we are able to judge, with no ordinary shirty. The translation—although by to means an easy task—has been well executed, and reflects great credit on the translator."
